

William Caslon cut his types on the Dutch pattern, and undoubtedly took van Dyck's romans and italics for his models. For a long time the fount of English used for printing Selden's Works, 1726, has been ascribed to Caslon, but Mr. A. F. Johnson has recently proved that the italic of the fount in question was the work of van Dyck and that the roman was also a Dutch importation. 2000.
